New Hatchet into Use.

Pittsburg, Pa., December 27.— Harry Faulkner, aged ave years, of the Northside, ordered a real live Shedland pony of Sania Claus, whom he saw on a street corner. Instead, he got a bright red hobbyhorse.
Among other presents was also a keen-edged hatche. Vesterday morning he was up early, before the rest of the family. He gazed at the Christmas tree and its spangles, then at his "pony," and immediately the hatchet was put into action. He hatched the free notifities heauty lay spread on the floor. He turned upon the "pony," and desisted only after it lay in chips and splinters about the room; then he sat down in a corner and cried, because Saata Claus did not know the difference between a pony and a hobbyhorse.
Police Sergeant Charles Faulkner, the boy's father, gave him a "private hearing," but has "reserved decision."
